

Tanya Lewis
Eco Organiser & Home Styling
PO Box 378
Red Hill VIC 3937

16 July 2012

Dear Tanya,

Thank you for getting active in our campaign to protect our food and farmland from genetic modification (GM). We're delighted to provide you approximately 250 copies of our True Food Guide. This guide is a special kids' edition, helping parents know which foods may contain GM organisms.

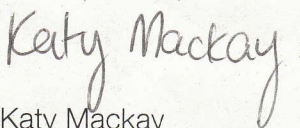

Australia's food labelling laws currently don't require all GM ingredients to be labelled. Furthermore, Australia's food regulator doesn't conduct independent testing on GM ingredients to ensure they are safe. Instead, it relies on the data provided by GM companies. The situation may become even more critical as Australia is the first nation in the world to begin experimenting with GM wheat – our most important agricultural crop. We're campaigning for improved labelling laws and to stop the commercialisation of GM wheat in Australia.

Greenpeace's Truefood Guide empowers consumers to make an informed choice about eating GM foods. Consumer pressure has urged many companies to adopt GM-free policies. With this edition of the guide, Kellogg's, Snackbrands Australia and SPC committed to not use GM ingredients.

To stay up to date with the campaign and for more ways to take action, please visit www.truefood.org.au. Here you can join our Truefood Network to receive the latest updates on the campaign via email.

We deserve food that's safe, healthy and doesn't cost the earth. Thanks again for taking action on this vital issue.

Kind regards

Katy Mackay
Supporter Relationships
Greenpeace Australia Pacific

PS. To help our GM-free campaign even further, please make a tax-deductible donation by calling 1800 815 151 or visiting www.greenpeace.org.au/donate. Thank you so much.

